

PART II -- THE INTRODUCTION

The purpose of an introduction

- > get your reader interested in reading the essay
- > tells your reader the book, author, (and character, usually) that you will discuss
- > tells your reader what you will discuss about the book/character → includes your thesis

➤ Think of your introduction as a funnel.

Start with a general statement about life. This is called a hook.

- The hook must be related to your thesis.
 - Example:

If your thesis is about how relationships affect a character,

THEN

your hook should be about how relationships affect people.

INTRODUCTION

EXAMPLE

The relationships ^{people with} we have ^{one} affect ^{anomal} us in many ways. ^{them}

End with your Thesis =

Jackie's relationship with Simon had a negative impact on the direction her life takes.
